

THE NEWS.

The situation in Virginia is substantially the same, so far as we are able to learn from today's dispatches. There is no official bulletin from the Secretary of War, though our telegraph columns are filled with interesting matters relating to the operations in Grant's army. The rebels disputed our passage over the North Anna river, but they were punished severely by Gen. Birney, who was highly commended by General Hancock. Our entire army is now reported to be south of the North Anna, and the 6th and 6th corps advancing in the direction of Richmond.

The news from Sherman is encouraging. His army has resumed its march, and has outdistanced Johnston's position on the Etowah river, where the rebels had hoped Sherman would have attacked them in their strong position.

The rebels are surprised at the strength of Sherman's army, the impression having gained ground that he had been much weakened, and after the evacuation of Dalton, citizens lost faith in the ability of Johnston to resist his advance. The depot of supplies at Atlanta, but they have commenced removing the stores from that place. Gen. Sherman's opinion is, that his undertaking will be successfully closed by the 1st of July.

Another rumor is about the effect that Johnston does not intend to fight Sherman at all, his troops having been sent to reinforce Lee and Beauregard.

Butler is in his hole and the rebels make frequent attacks upon his works.

Banks and staff are reported to be at New Orleans.

Two Congressional blackguards had a round at five o'clock yesterday. Chandler, of Michigan, and Voorhees, of Indiana were the combatants. The former was seriously damaged about the nose.

General Hunter assumed command of the Department of West Virginia on the 21st, with headquarters in the field.

A special dispatch from Fort Smith, Ark., says that General Steele has arrived at that post from Little Rock. The rebels have been, and are still quite troublesome in the surrounding country but measures have been taken to arrest their movements.

OUR QUOTA.

Captain Putnam furnishes us with a tabular statement giving the number of men furnished under each call, by the different towns in Rock county, and also the number of men still due from the several towns on the 15th of April last. This statement, the Captain thinks, includes all of the requisited men except perhaps some of the Barstow cavalry, which will be duly credited before a draft is made if one is ordered. In the case of Janesville and Beloit, where there is a deficiency in some wards and an excess in others, it is not at all probable that any more men will be called for, but the excess of one ward will go to balance the deficit of the others, for the reason that the bounty was paid by the cities and not by wards. By Captain Putnam informs us it is generally understood that the quota of men in the State will be required to fill up their quota under all the calls, without reference to what the other towns in the counties have done. In which case, it will be readily seen by the table which we publish herewith, what towns will be called on for more men, and how many they must yet furnish. It will be observed, also, that this county has furnished already more than double the deficit they charged against the several towns, in the aggregate, not to mention the one hundred day men just sent off. While the deficiency of all the towns is only 30, the excess in the county is 70, or more than double the number needed to save them all from draft.

The justice of this is seen from the part of the authorities to require to admit of question, and the example of those towns will see to it, if the deficiency is ordered filled, it will be done with the same promptness that has always characterized them.

The Richmond Examiner, of the 25th inst., reports flour at from $2.50 to $2.60 a barrel, apples at from $1.50 to $2.00 a barrel, bacon at from $2.50 to $3.00 a pound, butter at from $1.10 to $1.25 a pound, and fresh beef at from $1.25 to $1.50 a pound, wholesale.

This may be supposed the best first sight an appalling exhibit for the purchasers, but we submit whether the seller has not the worst of the bargain. To give a barrel of flour for an old bag of shingles with $2.00 printed on it, is to give a considerable amount of something for what amounts to considerably less than nothing.

Boston merchants are petitioning Congress to pass a law requiring National Banks to hold a reasonable part of their reserve in gold and silver, and that this reserve shall not be held until the redemption of specie payments by the Government banks of the United States.

"From the portion of my letter," says John M. Butler, "I said my family have seen nine battles fought on my own fields, and just before my own door, between hostile troops, who but yesterday, it was boasted of a common history, a common nationality, and a common destiny."

The Legislature of Massachusetts, after a session of four months and one week, adjourned on Saturday last. The members voted themselves $100 extra pay for the session, which the Governor vetoed, whereupon the members passed it over the veto, and pocketed the money.

The War in Virginia.

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Another day of uniform success has been added to the record of the army of the Potomac. The following is a full and succinct statement of the day's eventful history:

The whole army was in motion soon after daylight, and all the 4th corps moved toward North Anna River. The old telegraph road from Washington, via Fredericksburg, was the line of march for all the troops.

The wagon trains were ordered to follow the direct main road from Bowling Green to Hanover Court House. The two roads run almost parallel, so that the movement of troops covered and protected completely those of the trains. Warren had encamped on the telegraph road last night. To-night Burnside and Hancock started upon their leading them into it in the course of the morning.

Hancock, having camped several miles farther south than the others, reached first, and continued at the head of the west column. In the course of the morning it became positively established that the whole rebel army had the start of us in the morning toward Richmond. It was put in motion Saturday afternoon, and Hancock's corps striking directly from Spotsylvania Court House for the telegraph road, and Hill's moving towards it via Chancellorsville.

The head of Warren's column was not many hours behind the rear of Ewell's, and it was only by reason of the absence of our cavalry, that their trains got safely away. Hancock's corps reached this point at night, and before noon of yesterday, and continued on the telegraph road to Chancellorsville, or County Bridge on the North Anna river.

Warren, following Hancock, turned to the right on the road leading in a southerly direction to Chancellorsville, or Butler's Ford of the North Anna. Burnside had orders to turn off the telegraph road, about half way between this place and Chancellorsville bridge, and take the road to Oxford Ford. Wright has to march in the wake of Warren.

Hancock reached the vicinity of the river about 1 o'clock and discovered the enemy in force on the north bank, the approaches to which, both along the telegraph road and the Potomac and Richmond railroad, were protected by redoubts and lines of rifle pits, he halted and formed his corps into line about half a mile from the river, and to the right and left of the two roads.

The ground was thickly covered with woods, yielding his own movements along the telegraph road. He sent out a sharpshooters' company, closely skirting the river, cleared of timber and washed at his own base by a small creek, and forming altogether a very strong position for the enemy. The want of a knowledge of the ground delayed the formation of Hancock's line, which was established at 4 o'clock with Gibbons' division to the left, Barlow's in the center, Birney on the right, and Taylor's heavy artillery in support of the center and reserves.

About five o'clock orders were given to attack. Gibbons encountered hardly any opposition in advancing to the ridge bordering the river, but Birney and Barlow met with serious resistance.

The French's division was formed in an angle with Col. Egan's brigade on the left, Col. Pierce's on the right, and the 2d and 4th Regiments of the Excelsior Brigade in reserve. Matt's brigade of Barlow's division touched on Birney's right. As soon as Birney's line emerged from the wood at the base of the ridge, the enemy opened upon it with musketry from their rifle pits on the side of the road, and with an enfilading fire of shot and shell from some 15 pieces of artillery, stationed in sections at different commanding points.
